City Council considers car cluster on Federal

by Lisa Parsons

Lemon Grove may not have a "Mile of Cars" like National City, but it may soon have its own "cluster."

City Manager Jack Shelver said the City began discussing plans to create an area for car dealerships on Federal Boulevard, from College Avenue to Central Avenue, when Lee White Toyota informed the City that he would either have to expand or move his dealership. White had purchased approximately five acres of land across the street from his dealership on Federal Boulevard on which he hoped to build a large service center and a new auto body repair and paint shop.

White then discovered that a considerable amount of public improvements in the form of a drainage ditch, curbs and sidewalks would be needed before he could develop the land. The cost for these improvements was approximately $1.5 million.

Due to the high cost of the improvements that are basically for the public good, said Shelver, the City has agreed to provide $1.6 million to Lee White Toyota. "It is in the City's best interest to assist [car dealerships] by making the land usable at reasonable prices," he said. He also added that car dealerships contribute one-fourth of the sales tax for the City of Lemon Grove and are, therefore, a very important source of revenue.

The Federal Boulevard area is ideal for car dealerships because of its high visibility from the freeway, said Shelver, and in order to keep the area available for this type of development, the City Council enacted an urgency ordinance March 5. The ordinance states that, for about 10 parcels of property in that area, the zoning will be for car dealers only. The ordinance is only effective for 45 days and the City must hold a public hearing in order to extend it.

Federal Boulevard's stretch of freeway visibility and the amount of space available do not make it practical to create a "car row," but Shelver said the area could hold a "cluster" of three or four dealerships.

Corral Ford is one of the dealerships considering the move to Federal Boulevard, said Shelver. Auto dealers tend to do better if they are grouped together and Corral Ford has expressed an interest in expanding sales and service departments further than current space allows.

Lemon Grove Middle School Band & Orchestra Take Superiors at Festival!

Only one week has passed since the Solo & Ensemble Festival took place, and the Lemon Grove music students again showed fine performance at the Southern California School Band & Orchestra Festival held at Grossmont High School on March 9th. Friday afternoon, the Band & Orchestra students arrived at Grossmont to perform and also sight-read for judges. It was a very excited group of young people representing Lemon Grove who arrived back in Lemon Grove that evening with Superior ratings for both band & orchestra.

These young musicians come from all over Lemon Grove School District under the direction of Mr. Tom Higdon, District Music Director. They are required to maintain good grades on top of their performance schedules and to represent our fair city with their best.

The Grossmont Area Junior High Honor Band also placed in the Festival with a Superior rating. Several Lemon Grove Middle School students also play in the Grossmont Honor Band: Ryan Beard, Matt Bell, Priscilla Blatchford, Cynthia Chell, Dean DeRose, Christi Neely, Dan Peterman, Ranzie Raroque, Nuray Satterlee and J. J. Wright.

Congratulations to all Lemon Grove music students for a job well done.

Riding the Grossmont Shuttle

Free service provides easy access to Grossmont medical complex

It is 7:45 a.m., and J.R. Colmenero is getting ready for another day at work. He fastens the velcro ties on his shoes and slowly gets his belongings together.

Since suffering a stroke that left him partially paralyzed 10 years ago, J.R. moves at a slower pace. He uses special aids - velcro ties instead of shoelaces, loops that are pre-sewn into his socks, a carrying bag with a strap across his chest to free his hands to use a cane--to help him live independently.

One of the biggest "aids" in helping J.R. get to his almost daily volunteer job at Grossmont Hospital is a free shuttle service that runs from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. every weekday.

J.R. catches the Spring Valley bus outside his apartment at 8:25 and rides it to the Grossmont Center bus stop.

Then, at 8:45 on the dot, the Grossmont Hospital Shuttle arrives, and J.R. boards it, to be left off at the hospital's front door. At quitting time, the shuttle is there to take him back to the bus stop.

After his debilitating stroke and subsequent surgery, it was a long struggle to learn to walk and talk all over again. It meant spending six weeks as an inpatient in the Grossmont Rehabilitation Center and eight more months as an outpatient undergoing the necessary occupational and speech therapy. After that, J.R. lived with his sister and her family for five years, still needing help with things like putting on his socks and tying his shoes, since he only had the use of one hand.

Today, J.R. is completely independent and proud of it. He says he owes a lot to the occupational therapy he received at Grossmont.

And his way of "giving back" to the hospital is through his volunteer work. Several times a week, he works in the Rehabilitation Center, where, he boasts with a smile, "I'm their 'main man.'"

His duties include making photocopies, running errands and making deliveries with the help of a cart, which he pushes around the hospital corridors.

Bob Kimberlin, left, holding the door for J.R. Colmenero as he exits the shuttle on his way to work at Grossmont Hospital.

Grossmont Hospital is on a hill across from Grossmont Center. In order to get to work, J.R. used to have to struggle up that hill after being dropped off at the bus stop.

Although it is not a long distance, the walk up the hill can be a tough one for people who have a disabling condition, like J.R., or for the elderly.

That is why Grossmont Hospital contracted with the Wheel Division of the American Red Cross to provide a free shuttle service for patients and visitors to the hospital. In operation since September, the shuttle makes its daily rounds every weekday, taking visitors to and from the Grossmont Center bus stops and trolley station to the main hospital entrance, its rehabilitation centers and senior programs office, and nearby medical office buildings.

It is 3:45 p.m., and J.R. is arriving home after work. He settles down on the couch with his favorite hobby--working the crossword puzzle in the daily paper. "It keeps my brain functioning," J.R. explains.

He feels the same way about his volunteer work at the hospital. "Everyone at Grossmont has been good to me. The work keeps me active--it keeps me from going crazy. I don't know what I would do if I didn't have my work."

For J.R. Colmenero, going to work might be possible, but it wouldn't be very easy without the services of the Grossmont Hospital Shuttle.

It is because of people like him--not only volunteers, but patients and visitors who might otherwise find it inconvenient to get to the hospital, that the shuttle exists.

And it is for these people that the shuttle will continue to make its daily rounds.

It's the Law

by Brian L. Forbes, Attorney at Law

Question: I'm a tenant under a written lease with 3 years lease term remaining. There is other space available now for less rent. If my landlord won't let me out of my lease, can I just leave (abandon my current space)?

Answer: Yes, but if you do you would breach your lease, and your landlord could sue you for damages. Whether it makes sense for you to take that risk depends on your circumstances.

The measure of damages would depend on what the lease provides and on other circumstances. Under Civil Code 1951.2, you could be liable for each of four items of damage: (1) rent earned and unpaid when you move; (2) rent lost from the date you move to the date of award; (3) rent to be lost from the date of award to the end of the lease term, and (4) any other amount necessary to compensate your landlord for all detriment proximately caused by the breach--such as expenses of reletting, broker's fees, etc. All damages would be adjusted to present value at the time of the award (unpaid past due amounts would be increased by accrued interest, and amounts payable in the future would be discounted). If your landlord were to win, he would also recover court costs and, if the lease so provides, attorneys' fees. Finally, the judgement itself would bear interest until paid. Thus, it may be unwise to move out before expiration of your lease given your potential liability for damages.

On the other hand, damages (for breach) can't exceed the amount your landlord would have gained by full performance under the lease, and damages aren't recoverable to the extent your landlord could avoid them by acting reasonably in reletting the space. If current and/or future market rents exceed the rent specified by your lease, your landlord might have little, if any, actual damages.

As the breaching tenant, you would have the burden of providing the extent to which your landlord could have avoided damages. With the benefit of hindsight, however, you might criticize the landlords for failing to avoid damages--by failing to act quickly (if market rent rises after your move).

Even if your breach causes your landlord unavoidable damages, he might not elect to sue. There are lots of reasons to avoid litigation. Few things are certain in litigation except that it tends to be costly, time consuming and frustrating. Litigation is generally not good business. A landlord can't be certain of getting a favorable judgement, and even if he wins he may be unable to collect.

If you breach your lease, however, chances are you will be sued, and being the defendant in a lawsuit is even worse than being the plaintiff. So if you are inclined to abandon your current space, don't "just leave."

Try to avoid a lawsuit, and do what you can to reduce your exposure in case you get sued; give your landlord every opportunity to avoid damages (which you may have to pay), and consider steps that may help prove that you acted reasonably and/or your landlord did not.

First; discuss your problems with your landlord and try to renegotiate your lease. If that doesn't work, carefully consider the pros and cons of your alternatives. If you decide to move, preserve evidence of your circumstances and of your communications with your landlord, immediately give your landlord written notice of your intention to abandon the premises, and remind him of his duty to avoid damages by acting reasonably and in good faith in reletting the space. If there are unavoidable damages to the landlord, make a reasonable settlement proposal at the appropriate time, and remind your landlord that people go into lawsuits like pigs and go out like sausages. If he sues anyway, get competent counsel and win (or lose as little as possible).

Burglaries show 18% increase, overall crime increases by 7%

Crime in Lemon Grove increased by 7 percent in 1989, according to latest report of the San Diego Association of Government's Criminal Justice Research Unit. Here is the breakdown of crimes (Actual numbers listed):

	1988	1989
Homicide	1	0
Rape	6	7
Robbery	66	59
Aggravated assault	115	64
Burglary	397	471
Larceny	476	493
Motor vehicle theft	239	303
Arson	21	9

The SANDAG report noted that most of the burglaries (60 percent) in San Diego County did not involve a forced entry. Entry with no force includes entry through unlocked buildings or garages and open windows. In 28 percent of the burglaries, entry was through force, and in 11 percent there was an attempted entry. In these instances, suspects may have been deterred or hindered by prevention devices such as locks and alarms. Other factors that may have resulted in crimes not completed include the presence of dogs, neighbors, residents or police.

SANDAG also noted that available data indicated that residential burglaries occurred more often during daytime hours. One in 40 households in San Diego County were burglarized.

The report stated that most burglary investigations do not result in the arrest of suspects. In burglary cases, evidence is generally limited. The locations with the highest residential burglary rates were in the Central and Mid-city areas of the City of San Diego (40 or more crimes per 1,000 households). National City and Southeast San Diego had residential burglary rates between 30 and 39.9 per 1,000 households.

Publisher to head art show at Del Mar Fair

The publisher of the monthly San Diego Arts Calendar, Carol Dunn of Lemon Grove, has been named superintendent of the Del Mar Fair's Art in All Media exhibit.

Dunn, who also founded the Calendar, said that one of he first tasks is to seek art works for the show.

"It's in the tradition of the fair to have lots of people enter their in the different shows, and that's exactly how I feel about the art show," she said. "I encourage all artists, professional and amateur, to enter. We have categories for almost any art medium."

Dunn is also founder of the "Avenue of the Arts Festival," a semiannual outdoor event held in downtown San Diego in the fall as part of National Arts Week and in the spring during Artwalk. It features artists, demonstrators, hands-on activities and musical performances.

She currently is president of San Diego's Combined Organizations for the Visual Arts and has worked on various subcommittees with the San Diego Commission for Arts and Culture.

In college studies, Dunn has majored in both Art and Asian Studies, with a special interest in Japanese art.

"Our show at the fair is the oldest continuing art show in California," she said, "and it's known for its quality. Visitors will be able to learn about the different styles of art and increase their appreciation."

For Kids Day at the fair, Dunn has planned contests and other activities in the children's art show that will illustrate this year's fair theme: Rabbits and Roses.

For entry information on this year's Art in All Media show, contact the entry office at 755-1161 or 296-1441.

El Cajon should adopt regional attitude on trolley

The controversy between El Cajon factions and Santee over the Trolley Line extension is harmful to the entire East County. The legal barbed wire that is being strung in the path of MTDB can only cause inflated costs, time delay, and be disruptive to the cooperative effort to provide mass transportation where it is sorely needed. The voters, in approving Prop A, said overwhelmingly that they want the line to be extended to Santee and beyond. They want cleaner air, less dependance on fossil fuels, and uncrowded highways. They want to save hard cash by traveling on mass transit instead of private automobiles. The segment of our population who cannot drive cars, for whatever reason, deserve a means to be transported where they must go. The system benefits every person in every community that it services in some manner or other. A strictly parochial attitude is not fair to others, nor is it really more beneficial to a single community. The illusionary logic that it is, is just patently wrong.

The inconveniences and minor glitches that occur during construction and as a result of traffic conflicts are being addressed and mitigated in good faith. They occurred on the South Line and on the extension out to Euclid. Then they impacted Lemon Grove and La Mesa, as well as El Cajon. MTDB has an excellent track record of meeting its responsibilities and will do no less in the future. Being a good neighbor, and cooperating in a project that has such profoundly beneficial effects for all of us, is just common sense.

Come on, El Cajon, be the good sport that we know you clan be and let us get on with the Trolley.

Another Lost Empire

The year was 1955, Eisenhower was president, and the United States of America was the riches and mightiest of all nations. We had grown with God's blessings and much sweat and tears from a handful of settlers to nearly 200 million people in only a couple hundred years.

Our farms reaped more of the richest yields, our industries produced more automobiles, ships, airplanes, etc., than all other nations put together. Any product "Made in Japan" was considered inferior as it was made out of our junk.

The Allied nations had won World War II, so it was our obligation to finance the rebuilding of the poor devastated countries that were destroyed by our bombs. Why not? We were the richest nation in the world.

Forty-five years have past and we have created two of the richest, most industrial producing countries, Japan and West Germany, and they lost the War. We have financed the Mid-East oil fields and have since purchased back that oil, at prices they now demand, and have made the Arab countries richer than belief. Our country protected and financed the Central and South Americans until they are now saying: "Yankee Stay Out."

As of the present the only commodity that we still excel in is agriculture but, with our farmer's economy slowly deteriorating, that too could slip through our grasp. Have we given away the "Store?"

President Franklin Roosevelt started spending money to bring the country out of depression and each president for the next 57 years has tried to outdo his spending; which was peanuts to our present deficit, which is in the trillions.

Five of the 11 largest banks of California are owned by Japanese money. Over half of downtown L.A. is owned by foreign capital. Even some of the automobile plants in this country are either owned by, or are in partnership with, foreign companies.

Could this be the beginning of the end to the United States of America, mightiest nation on earth? Our history books taught us the downfall of such great empires as Roman, Greek, Spanish, British, Napoleon, Russian, and especially Hitler's. They all had their"Heyday:" Colonized or conquered, boasted or bragged, and then tumbled.

Who can we blame for our dwindling power? The answer is the same for individual or nation. Most every celebrity that has made it big too fast has gone down by not being able to cope with such success.

If we resented foreign autos, why didn't we stick to buying American-made products? Why did our unions jack the worker's wages up so high that we could not compete abroad? Why wasn't the government's budget balanced way back when and not left to grow until its present impossible size?

I do believe that we are all to blame. The American people are proud enough to fight for their country and also humble enough to take care of the defeated. Are we too soft? I don't know if we are or not, but I do know that I feel good about helping the underdog. Maybe that's why we are a "Christian Nation," mighty or not.

President supports National Endowment for the Arts

President Bush is to be highly commended for one of his most recent stands. No, this is not his protest at having to eat broccoli, which seems to have grabbed most of the headlines. Rather, it is his decision to oppose content restrictions in the funding of the National Endowment for the Arts. Fending off considerable pressure from Senator Jesse Helms and members of his own inner circle, the President has proposed a five year extension of the NEA while rejecting a strong movement to attach content control to the funding.

As one is well aware, a storm of protest set off last year by highly questionable "art" projects funded by the NEA, resulted in congressional action banning the financing of "obscene" art works. This is, of course, an age old human and societal struggle which is replayed in some form or other, scientific or artistic, in each generation. The persecutions of Galileo and El Greco of bygone years have their modern counterparts. It is most tempting, when viewing "art" that is obscene, insensitive, and personally hurtful to want to legislate a halt to it. Much of that "art" around which the controversy swirls, is most certainly created to shock and gore the public at large. As such, its "artistic" value is highly suspect.

But, as the President has surely determined, the danger of legislating it away is infinitely more threatening to a free society. Inevitably, a first step in totalitarian thought control is this limiting of creative thought and expression. Hitler knew this well when, early in his regime, he began the systematic burning of books and the works of certain artists. The creative mind is a continual threat to those who would control human destiny. NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer put is best. After apologizing to those offended by the controversial art he added, "Art is like research. It is trying new things, taking risks, pushing boundaries. Not all art succeeds. To not do research is to stand still and be bypassed by the rest of the world."

All human beings are art critics. We like or dislike artistic representation in a highly subjective manner. Our religion, upbringing, values and experiences all form the basis for our tastes and judgements. As long as they are ours, it works well, but when we begin to impose on others, we are in conflict. We are often, it seems, too eager to "know what's best" for others. This writer finds such "artistic" expressions as crucifixes in urine and sadomasochistic themes personally repellant. But to say that we ban them from our midst is a potential first step in banning much else that is not repellant but perhaps only politically threatening.

It is argued by those who would control content that "they can have their questionable art, but not at public expense." This is a tempting argument. After all, even if NEA doesn't fund them they can always show privately. But control is control and once it sees the light of day within our creative or scientific communities, it will not easily go away. President Bush knows this and has shown statesmanship and courage in defending creative integrity. We may not like the product, but we know well the hazards of banning it.

Ladies Tackle Tough Course

The Ladies Professional Golf Association tour swings into San Diego next week. The Red Robin, Kyocera Inamori Golf Classic comes complete with a "Shootout," a pair of Pro-Am warm-ups and 72 holes of serious competition in pursuit of the first place prize of $45,000. Action comes your way April 3rd to the 8th.

The ladies will test the demanding up and down range at North County's StoneRidge Country Club for the third straight year and if the tournament follows it's own format, defending champion Patty Rizzo is gonna win again.

"I'll take it," she told a gathering of golf writers a few weeks ago. She won the 1989 crown with a 7-under par 277 to nip runner-up Martha Nause by a pair of swings.

"The course looks great. You can tell the StoneRidge crew put in a lot of time getting the course ready for the tournament. I think it will take at least another 277 to win, and if you give that to me right now, I'll take my chances with it."

That sounds like a good bet. Anything under par at StoneRidge ranks as an accomplishment of the first order.

Not because the course blustered through an unkind winter or suffered frost damage. It did, of course, but hard work and green thumbs undid the damage.

Course Superintendent Delfino Cano has learned to listen to the grass. It tells him things. Like where the frost bit the deepest. Which trees are in danger of falling. Which sections have too much water. Which sections need water.

Cano listens and sets his crews to work accordingly. He's got ol' StoneRidge reseeded, reset and ready. The Red Robin Kyocera may even play a bit longer this year with deeper grass and new teeing grounds.

You can get to StoneRidge by heading up Interstate 15 to Rancho Bernardo Rd. and driving east to the edge of Poway. The course is on your left and the place looks flat from outside the fence. Park in one of the public lots near the entrance and the shuttle ride to the club house will change your view.

The "old" nine, played as the back nine for the tournament, is rather level and keeps its interest through bunkers, traps and some rather nasty water hazards.

The front nine for the tournament is something else. You play uphill on the first hole. Almost straight up. The caddy master at StoneRidge is also a shepherd and one wouldn't be too surprised to see him herd a flock of mountain goats into the high pasture for summer grazing.

Once at the top, there is only one way to come down. You got it. You tee off in the clouds and drive deep into a valley on a nasty dogleg into the woods. Then you face a par 5 hole that looks as if it covers the next two mountain tops.

The ladies have the game for StoneRidge. Clyde Griffin is a veteran San Diego golf pro who makes it a point to see 'em play.

"They play a sound game," Griffin claims. "They don't hit as far as the PGA touring pros, but they play a tighter game from the drive on in. You can learn a lot just watching 'em."

That's what he plans to do. How about you? Tickets are on sale just about everywhere golf is spoken.

County Supervisor Susan Golding comments on the importance of the 1990 census to all San Diegans

Every ten years the Census Bureau attempts to count every resident of San Diego County. The degree of our political representation and the amount of public funds we receive are based upon that tally.

"If there is an under-count, our community will lose both the political clout it deserves and untold millions of dollars for the services it so desperately needs.

"For years to come, our legislators in Sacramento will look at the 1990 San Diego census to guide them in making public policy and formulas for government aid to San Diego's elderly, handicapped, single parents, children, and homeless. Plans to improve schools and transportation will begin with the census count.

"In Washington, Congress will use the census to decide where to target grants and identify regions with special needs for employment, energy, housing and child care assistance, for example.

"If every San Diegan participates in the census, the true population of our neighborhoods and communities will be used--and we will get our fair share of funds.

"Perhaps more important, we need our fair share of representation. After the census is completed, the figures will be used as the basis for redrawing the boundaries of practically every state, national and local political jurisdiction.

"With the tremendous growth that has occurred in San Diego County, along with the increase of ethnic minorities, it is vital that an accurate count results in new districts that will insure that everyone has a voice in our government at every level.

"For these reasons, it is impossible for me to emphasize too strongly the importance of a complete and thorough census count. To be fair to all, everyone must be counted.

"This Saturday morning I will join with community leaders and door-to-door volunteers to help campaign for a record turn-out for the census in every San Diego neighborhood.

"Let's ourselves count! Look for your questionnaire this week. Answers are confidential and will only take a few minutes to complete. Those minutes are the best investment we can make in the future of our community."

Annual Spring Concert draws record crowd at Lemon Grove Middle School

It was "standing room only" at the Annual Spring Concert on March 15th at the Lemon Grove Middle School Auditorium. Lemon Grove was treated to a performance by three groups. The Beginning Band (made up of Elementary School music students and Middle School students taking up other instruments or just helping out), was the first to perform. The Superior rated LGMS Orchestra and the Superior rated LGMS Band followed with an outstanding performance by all. The concert was open to all at no charge and our thanks to the talented students who shared it with us all.

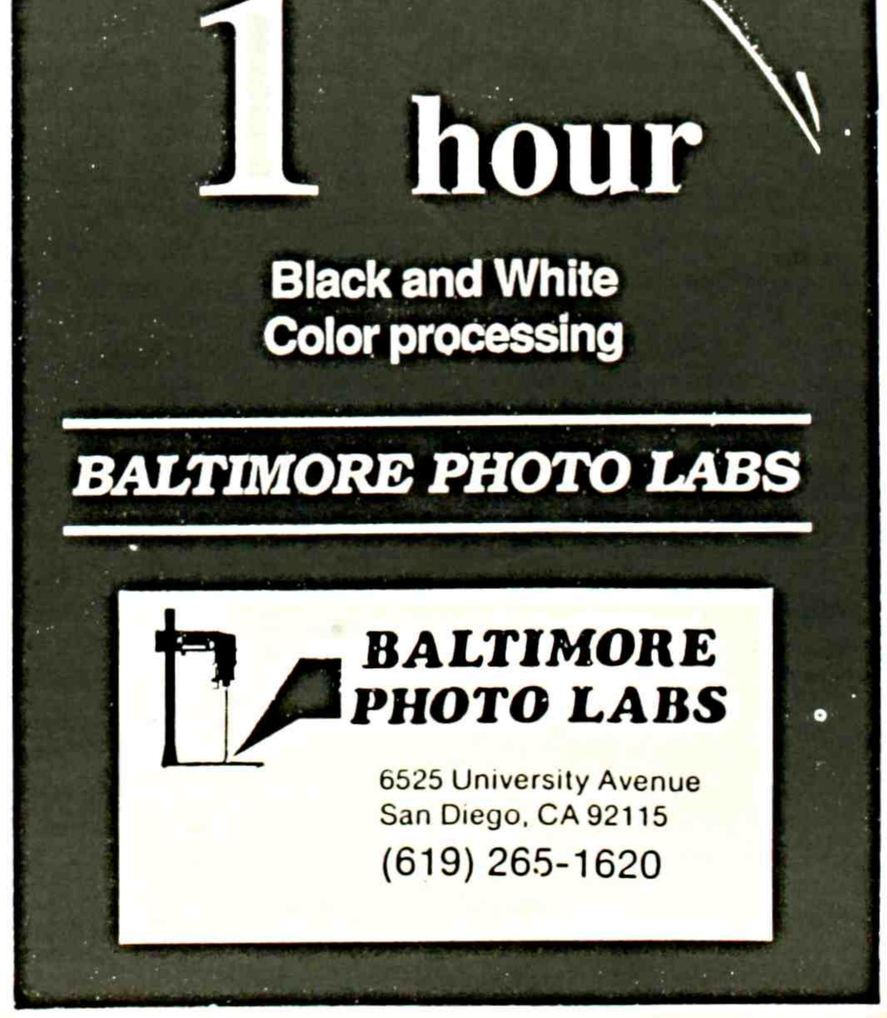

The next performance will be in the Maytime Band Review on May 5th in National City. Everyone is welcome to come out and see them march! The competition will be tough. In the meantime, please help our performers in their schedule to prepare for this event by watching for them on School Lane between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. Your cooperation is so important, and allows the Band to practice on the surface on which they must shine!

PAL Fishing Derby at Chollas Lake

Chollas Lake will be hopping with two tons of catfish and trout for the Police Athletic League's Second Annual Fishing Derby for youths 15 and under.

PAL's goal is to keep kids busy in sports and enrichment activities and out of the reach of drugs and gangs, and has reached over 10,000 youths in its first year of operation. PAL is reaching even more kids in its second year, as well as supporters committed to PAL's goals.

There will be food, drawings for prizes and a youth appointed Chief of Police for the day. The whole family is encouraged to bring their fishing poles (a small number will be available for use) and folding chairs, and enjoy the day of festivities at the beautiful outdoor setting of Chollas Lake.

Last year PAL had over 1,000 participants and anticipates even more for this year's event. The lake gates will open at 7 a.m. and close at 4 p.m.

One-day train trip to Mexico offered

The special train will leave the international border at the Calexico/Mexicali crossing at 8:25 a.m. for the 312 mile round trip.

Passengers may drive their own cars to the border or ride chartered connecting buses from La Mesa, San Diego and Escondido. Tickets must be purchased in advance. For information and reservations, please call the Museum office at (619) 291-9220.

Canyoneers plan April hikes

The public in invited to join the San Diego Natural History Museum Canyoneers on a series of hikes in the San Diego County area during the month of April.

On Saturday, April 7, from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m., two hikes are planned on Fortuna Mountain. Participants may choose between a long or short hike on the Mountain located within Mission Trails Regional Park. The short hike begins in one of the few remaining areas possessing vernal pools with threatened species such as Mesa Mint, then continues along the sea-cut coastal plain where vegetation will be examined. The long hike follows an easy trail toward the foot of Fortuna Mountain. Participants are encouraged to bring water and a lunch on the hike. To get to Fortuna Mountain, Mission Trails Regional park, from I-5 take Clairemont Mesa Blvd. east to Santo Rd. Turn left (north) and proceed to Portobelo Rd. and park.

Hikers will be treated to an interesting array of wildlife and vegetation on a hike planned for Sunday, April 8, from 2-3:30 p.m. at Rancho Mission Canyon Park. This park is hidden among residential hills harboring a streamside community of vegetation and wildlife. To get to Rancho Mission Canyon Park, take I-8 to Mission Gorge Rd. north to Margerum Ave. Turn right (east) on Margerum and proceed a couple of blocks to the parking on the left.

San Dieguito County Park is the location of a third hike planned for Saturday, April 14 from 10-11:30 a.m. Nestled among several finger canyons, this coastal park contains a blend of maintained and natural areas. An extensive trail system provides access to chaparral habitats and geological formations that were once underwater. There is a day use fee of $1. To find San Dieguito County Park, take the Lomas Santa Fe exit from I-5 and go east one mile to Sun Valley Rd. Turn left on Sun Valley and continue to the park entrance.

On Sunday, April 22 from 2-3:30 p.m., a hike is planned along Lake Wohlford in Escondido. Oak woodland borders the dam-created lake, which is a favorite spot for fishing. The area supports water fowl and lush growth of native vegetation. To get to Lake Wohlford, take I-5 to Bear Valley parkway north to Lake Wohlford Rd. Turn right on Lake Wohlford and follow it up the hill to the lake. Participants are asked to meet at the parking lot near the boat landing.

The last hike planned for April will occur at Serra High School Canyon on Sunday, April 29 from 2-3:30 p.m. This canyon, hidden in a tiny ravine between a shopping center, a school and a highway, offers a variety of native chaparral. Surprises along the small creek include fuchsia-flowered gooseberry and mountain mahogany. Among the many birds to be found are three species of hawks. Ecology demonstrations by Serra students enrich the walk. To get to the canyon, take Clairemont Mesa Blvd. east from I-5 to Santo Rd. and turn right (south) and head up a long block. Turn right into the north parking lot of Serra High School and park at the far end.

The Canyoneers are San Diego Natural History Museum volunteers with special training to teach an appreciation of the native plants and animals in the natural areas of San Diego County. Walks are free and open to the public. For more information, please call 232-3821.
